- I. This scholarship is established to encourage international graduate and undergraduate students actively learning Chinese, improving their Chinese language skills and strengthening their career competitiveness after graduation.
- II. Subjects: The International Industrial Talent Education Special Program (INTENSE Program) or international graduate and undergraduate students formally registered at the University (excluding the International Bachelor Program, students from Macau and Hong Kong, overseas Chinese, mainland Chinese and exchange students) who have not received government scholarships since the second semester of the 2021 academic year (inclusive). Two-year technical program, four-year technical program, and graduate students who have studied at the University for two semesters (inclusive) or other international student who studied at the University as pre-graduate student for one semester (inclusive) are also eligible to apply (excluding graduates or students resuming their studies after suspension or extension of studies).
- III. Number of applications: One application every semester starting from the third semester. Other international pre-graduate students may apply once only starting from the second semester.
- IV. Exam: The Language Center of the University will hold two Chinese tests every semester. International graduate and undergraduate students shall attend one test every semester and may not repeat a test. From the third semester, the test results of the previous two semesters will be used as a pre-test score (A) and the test results from the previous semester will be used as a post-test score (B). Other graduate students who are admitted as international pre-graduate students shall attend the Test of Chinese as Foreign Language, TOCFL when applying for a master's degree.
- V. Category: The scholarship is divided into full and half scholarships.
- VI. The scholarship will be distributed in the order of the same nationality, period (spring, fall class), and school system (same for students from different countries).
- VII. Scholarship review standards and methods:
 - A. Full scholarship: A scholarship covering full tuition and miscellaneous semester fees.
 1. Graduate students: Apply in the third and fourth semesters.
 - (1) Scholarship standards for the third semester: Study at least six credits in each of the previous two semesters and maintain an average test score of 75 or above in the previous semester. Additionally, the student must rank in the top 20% (inclusive) (round up decimals). This is calculated using the 30% Chinese pre-test score (A), 50% Chinese post-test score (B), and 20% Chinese progress score (B-A) from the previous two semesters. The student must also have a conduct score greater than 80 (inclusive) without a demerit (or two complaints). If more than one student has the same score, the student with the higher post-test score (B) shall be selected.

- (2) Scholarship standards for the fourth semester: Study at least six credits in each of the previous three semesters (except for a thesis with confirmation from the advisor) and maintain an average test score of 75 or above in the previous semester. Additionally, the student must rank in the top 20% (inclusive)(round up decimals). This is calculated by some of the 30% Chinese pre-test score (A), 50% Chinese post-test score (B), and 20% Chinese progress score (B-A) from the previous two semesters. The student must also have a conduct score greater than 80 (inclusive) without a demerit (or two complaints). If more than one student has the same score, the student with the higher post-test score (B) shall be selected.
2. Undergraduate students' applications starting from the third semester: Study at least nine credits in the previous semester and maintain an average test score of 65 or above in the previous semester. Additionally, the student must rank in the top 20% (inclusive)(round up decimals). This is calculated using the 30% Chinese pre-test score (A), 50% Chinese post-test score (B) and 20% Chinese progress score (B-A) from the previous two semesters. The student must also have a conduct score greater than 80 (inclusive) without a demerit (or two complaints). If more than one student has the same score, the student with the higher post-test score (B) shall be selected.
 3. Graduate students who are admitted as international pre-graduate students: who pass the Test of Chinese as Foreign Language, TOCFL with a grade of B1 or above may submit the application from the second semester.
- B. Half scholarships: A scholarship covering half the tuition fees and miscellaneous semester fees.
1. Graduate students: Apply in the third and fourth semesters.
 - (1) Scholarship standards for the third semester: Study at least six credits in each of the previous two semesters and maintain an average test score of 75 or above in the previous semester. Additionally, the student must rank in the top 20% (inclusive) to 70% (round up decimals). This is calculated using the 30% Chinese pre-test score (A), 50% Chinese post-test score (B), and 20% Chinese progress score (B-A) from the previous two semesters. The student must also have a conduct score greater than 80 (inclusive) without a demerit (or two complaints). If more than one student has the same score, the student with the higher post-test score (B) shall be selected.
 - (2) Scholarship standards for the fourth semester: Study at least six credits in each of the previous three semesters in general (except for a thesis with confirmation from the advisor), maintain an average test score of 75 or above in the previous semester, and rank in the top 20% to 70% (inclusive) (round up decimals). This is calculated by the sum of 30% for the pre-test score for Chinese (A), 50% for the post-test score for Chinese (B), and 20% progress for the Chinese score (B-A) in the previous two semesters. Additionally, a conduct score greater than 80 (inclusive) without a demerit (or two complaints). If more than one student has the same score, the student with the higher post-test score (B) shall be selected.

2. Undergraduate students' applications starting from the third semester: Study at least nine credits in the previous semester and maintain an average test score of 65 or above in the previous semester, and rank in the top 20% to 70% (inclusive) (round up decimals). This is calculated by the sum of 30% for the pre-test score for Chinese (A), 50% for the post-test score for Chinese (B), and 20% progress for the Chinese score (B-A) in the previous two semesters. Additionally, a conduct score greater than 80 (inclusive) without a demerit (or two complaints). If more than one student has the same score, the student with the higher post-test score (B) shall be selected.
3. Graduate students who are admitted as international pre-graduate students: who pass the Test of Chinese as Foreign Language, TOCFL with a grade of A2 or above may submit the application from the second semester.
